Our product liability lawyers are frequently retained in complex commercial product cases involving multi-million dollar economic loss claims. These cases typically arise where one company sues another alleging that the product was defective or did not perform as promised or expected.

We understand the important features of this type of complex product litigation: the impact of warranty and limitation on liability clauses, the special considerations where there is an ongoing business relationship, the use of arbitration, and the need for forensic accountants to prove or disprove economic loss. Our capability in these complex cases is enhanced by the depth of our expertise as one of Canada's leading business law firms.
