construction and industrial equipment

Defending product liability cases involving construction materials and industrial equipment requires an understanding of the complex settings in which these products are generally used. Our capability in defending construction material cases is enhanced by the expertise of our construction litigation group which has expertise acting for owners, contractors and consultants on complex construction projects.

we have the experience and the resources

When it comes to defending industrial equipment cases, we understand the role that environment, operator and machine can play in developing a successful defence. Some of the world's largest industrial equipment manufacturers have turned to us for help in defending their products in complex litigation and inquests.
