

food products

Product liability litigation involving food is on the rise. Plaintiffs' counsel across the United States and Canada have been moving aggressively into this area. As a result, Canadian and American food manufacturers are facing increasingly serious legal risks, and increasing vulnerability to class action proceedings.

We Have The Experience And The Resources

The cornerstone of a defence in any food liability lawsuit is an understanding of the regulations that apply to the manufacturing and distribution process. Our experience includes acting for one of the world's largest food companies in product liability litigation. When food product issues arise, we can assist you with everything from regulatory reporting and recalls, through to the handling of individual consumer complaints and commercial litigation against responsible suppliers.

helpful links:

Health Canada

Consumer Packaging and Labelling Act \(R.S., 1985, c. C-38\)

Canadian Food Inspection Agency

<< RETURN to Product Liability Litigation