

medical devices

Product liability litigation is a substantial area of risk for medical device manufacturers. Class actions and mass torts mean that the skilled defence of product liability claims can be crucial to a manufacturer's financial viability and its continued ability to provide patients with innovative and competitive products.

we have the experience and the resources

The effective defence of medical device litigation requires specialized expertise. Such claims typically involve complex issues of engineering sciences and medical causation. Defence counsel must have a sound knowledge of these issues to successfully defend medical device claims. Our product liability lawyers have developed this expertise through years of working closely with leading medical device manufacturers in defending their product liability claims.

Our firm is particularly adept when it comes to cross-border co-ordination, an increasingly important skill set when defending complex medical device litigation, particularly in the area of class actions and mass torts. Our product liability team also maintains an extensive network of academics, clinicians and consultants to provide support and expert evidence in pharmaceutical cases.

helpful links:

Health Canada, Drugs and Health Products Homepage

Federal Medical Devices Regulations

List of Canadian Advertising Preclearance Agencies

Product Recall/Notices \(MedEffect\)

Medical Devices Active Licence Listing \(MDALL\)

Quality Systems ISO 13485

<< RETURN to Product Liability Litigation